

Integración processes of a Romanian group in a Huelva village through family life stories

---

Conclusions

- The integration of Romanian population in the village is a gradual process, influenced by various factors such as cultural differences, social networks, and educational opportunities.
- The integration process is complex and requires a multidisciplinary approach involving educators, social workers, and family members.
- The integration process is influenced by the attitudes and perceptions of the local community towards the Romanian population.
- The integration process is facilitated by the establishment of social networks and the development of cultural exchanges.
- The integration process is hindered by the lack of access to education and employment opportunities for the Romanian population.

---

Key Takeaways

- The integration of the Romanian population is a complex process influenced by cultural, social, and economic factors.
- The integration process is facilitated by the establishment of social networks and the development of cultural exchanges.
- The integration process is hindered by the lack of access to education and employment opportunities for the Romanian population.

---

Relaciones

- Inhabitants and local institutions of Lucena del Puerto.
- Romanian community.
- Teachers.
- Students.
- Parents.
- Couples.
- Children.
- Women.
- Men.
- Social workers.
- Volunteers.

---

Journal of New Approaches in Educational Research

Edition: Dru. Roubeil Roig-Villa and Dr. Santiago Mengual Andrés

Paper design and adaptation: Angel Jorge vigilante Cano

---

References