Introduction

Lifelong learning at universities: future perspectives

The focus is shifted from an institutional view to students and their learning, which, including lifelong learning processes, includes lifelong learning in various phases of life. "Lifelong learning" includes lifelong learning processes. It arises from the premise that individuals need to update and enhance their skills and competencies throughout their lives, and therefore, need to resume educational processes in various phases of life. Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.

Objectives

1) to study light on teaching and learning practices in higher education, and
2) to provide an update on teaching and learning research and programs.

Methods

Aims of the present study

- To study light on teaching and learning practices in higher education.
- To provide an update on teaching and learning research and programs.

Results

- The study revealed that students need to update and enhance their skills and competencies throughout their lives.
- The focus is shifted from an institutional view to students and their learning, which includes lifelong learning processes.
- Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.

Discussion and conclusions

- The teaching strategies and activities studied support the existence of various teaching strategies and activities.
- Students' perspectives, the role of students in their learning and development, and the role of teachers in students' learning and development are important.
- Different teaching activities are implemented depending on the teaching strategy.

About the perspective of learners (according to three categories)

- Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.
- Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.

Perspective of experienced teachers

- The study revealed that students need to update and enhance their skills and competencies throughout their lives.
- The focus is shifted from an institutional view to students and their learning, which includes lifelong learning processes.
- Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.

About the experience of students

- The study revealed that students need to update and enhance their skills and competencies throughout their lives.
- The focus is shifted from an institutional view to students and their learning, which includes lifelong learning processes.
- Lifelong learning includes lifelong learning processes.

Different teaching activities are implemented depending on the teaching strategy.